Pull up a chair. The water sector needs better storytellers.

A global virtual cafe for water and climate communicators

Communication isn't a soft skill. It is a survival skill for the water sector. We exist to build the people and infrastructure that make water stories impossible to ignore.

THE GAP WE ARE CLOSING

Water is the most critical resource on earth. The people working to protect it are doing extraordinary work but that work isn't landing the way it should. Not because the work isn't worthy. Because translating complex science into stories people actually feel is a skill that's been overlooked, underfunded, and left without a home. We are building that home.

WHAT HAPPENS HERE

- Connect & Collaborate A WhatsApp network where communicators across 20+ countries share opportunities, swap strategies, and spark unexpected collaborations. No gatekeeping. No hierarchy.
- Weekly Water Brief The water and climate news worth reading, jobs worth applying for, and opportunities worth knowing about. Curated. Concise. Every week.
- WSC Virtual Café Monthly catch-ups with organizations and individuals spotlighting how to best tell water stories. Think TED Talk meets coffee hour.
- Spotlight Series We shine a light on individuals, communities, and organizations doing remarkable work in water. Because the best stories deserve an audience, and a megaphone.

WHAT MAKES US DIFFERENT

There are networks for water engineers. Associations for water policy experts. Conferences for water scientists. There has never been a dedicated community for the communicators translating all of that work into stories the world can act on. Until now.

WHO WE SHOW UP FOR

Early-career communicators finding their footing. Seasoned professionals looking for peers. Organizations with critical work that isn't reaching the right audiences. We are especially deliberate about centering emerging voices, the Global South, and gender equity in who gets to shape the water narrative.
